professional artists; from painters and photographers, to sculptors and ceramists, to artisans in jewelry, woodworking and yes, even dryer lint. The breadth and caliber of the work is an enriching cultural experience of both the arts and the artists who call Long Beach 'home'. Many are part of permanent collections in national museums and one artist has even been a guest on Johnny Carson. This biennial is the largest one to date and not to be missed. Profiles of all artists can be found online at midcitystudiotour.com

years ago, a group of Long Beach artists opened their studios to the public. The response was so positive, they established a bi-annual tour. This has become a highly anticipated event, drawing thousands of art lovers and collectors from both local and long distance to enjoy a weekend of art appreciation, music and connections.
